

Hello, my name is Emiliano and I am a software developer. I studied at the University of Buenos Aires city of Tandil to be systems analysts.

In relation to work, at the beginning I was working creating websites and trying to position them in the google search engine to be able to earn income, then I was working with a software cooperative where I was working with web development, it was a software that managed software products clients and finally I went to work where I am now where I was able to acquire a lot of knowledge because I was working with servers, data communication and programming,
